Airflow pattern

The flow of the Hrazdan River through the gorge channels fresh, clean air into Yerevan. Due to pressure differences, this refreshing air rises from the gorge into the city's central areas. Positioned on a ledge and directly in the path of these air currents, Skyline enjoys exceptional air quality, providing residents with a fresh and comfortable environment to live and relax.

An architectural rendering of a modern urban development at night. The scene features a mix of old and new architecture. On the left, a historic stone building with arched windows stands next to a new, curved glass skyscraper. In the center and right, more modern glass buildings with balconies and terraces are illuminated from within. The foreground shows a paved pedestrian plaza with young trees, streetlights, and people walking. To the right, there is an outdoor seating area with tables, chairs, and umbrellas, where several people are sitting. The overall atmosphere is vibrant and contemporary.
